The story is as we have polluted the world's surface water, we are taking water from the ground, from ground water or from wilderness or from watersheds, and we're moving it where we want it to be, so to water great big huge cities that then dump it into the ocean, so don't return it to the watershed, or we pave over what's called water-retentive lands, so we don't have the hydrologic cycle able to fulfill its responsibility and bring water back.

—MAUDE BARLOW

LIVING WATERS

2013 THEME: LIVING WATERS

The global water crisis is the first face of climate change. Protecting our water sources is as crucial as curbing greenhouse gas emissions.

— DAVID SUZUKI, award-winning scientist, environmentalist, broadcaster and author of The Sacred Balance

As people alive today, we must consider future generations: a clean environment is a human right like any other. It is therefore part of our responsibility towards others to ensure that the world we pass on is as healthy, if not healthier, than we found it. — DALAI LAMA

ABOUT THE SUMMIT

Join individuals and congregations from around the state to learn about the sacred gift of life and its connection to faith, spirituality and ethics. Be inspired by speakers and each other, and enjoy a seasonal dinner with old and new friends.

With the theme "Living Waters," the Summit will explore big picture water issues we are facing on global, regional and local levels, and provide practical ideas on how to address the issues at home and in your congregation.

Roundtables and presentations will explore water theologically and ecologically from a broad perspective and provide practical ideas on what you can do at the home, congregation and community levels.
